Have You Seen Us Lately?

Our little wine cellar has taken on a great big new look and we want to say a great big thank you to everyone. Thank you to all of our wonderful customers who were very patient with us while we were closed and under construction recently.
Thank you to our wonderful landlord, George Bush who allowed us the opportunity to make some changes to our little wine cellar. And a very special thank you to Audrey Tinker, owner of SAGE Signature Homes, who made our remodeling project a reality, and who worked so very hard to get the project completed as quickly as possible. Audrey, you have made a long-time dream for Lone Star Wine Cellars come true. Thank you so very much. You did a fabulous job and WE LOVE IT!

To all of you out there in Newsletter Land, come see us soon and see what all the fuss was about. During our remodeling project, we added a beautifully arched brick entrance with an iron gate and sconces, removed the "V" shape and doors that cut into the wine cellar, created access to the hall from behind the bar and painted throughout.

We also removed the wall that separated the two sides of the wine cellar, and most importantly, we managed to keep "Susan's Pole" intact for those wonderful "Pole Dances". Yes, you read it right. "Pole Dances". So now with the wall gone, we can all see much better. If you don't know what I'm talking about, you need to come see for yourself. You might want to call ahead to make sure she'll be performing. Saturday is usually a good day to catch the show.

Thank you again for your patience while we remodeled.

The Day the Wall Almost Came Tumbling Down

Once Upon a Time in a little town named McKinney, there was a small shop called "Lone Star Wine Cellars". What a beautiful day it was that Saturday afternoon. Customers were all about in and out with their busy day. Business was as usual. The shopkeepers, Rubye and Carol, were minding the store when the little ol' winemaker and his wife stopped in to say hello. "Hello ladies. How are you today?" asked the winemaker's wife.

"Well we're just fine, thank you." they replied as they went about their chores. While the little ol' ladies(excuse me . . .) While the young ladies continued with their conversation, the little ol' winemaker went back behind the "Wine Wall" to snoop around and see if he could find a Mich Ultra in the frig. All of a sudden for no apparent reason, there was a big thud and the "Wine Wall" lurched forward. Pictures perched atop the shelves tumbled over and bottles of wine came flying down off the shelves and crashing to the floor from every direction. Wine flew everywhere and purple people were gasping and screaming and running for their lives. "Oh my goodness, cried Rubye". "Gracious Sakes Alive" exclaimed Carol!" Just then the little ol' winemaker stuck his head out from behind the "Wine Wall" and with a sheepish look on his face he squeaked out, "What's going on out here?" as if he didn't know! Before it was over, nearly every bottle of wine on the Wine Wall was broken, smashed, obliterated. What a mess. Wine was everywhere; on the floor, on the walls, on the ceiling, even in the other room. Alas, there was one bottle still standing; one bottle of wine with a medal hanging 'round the neck.
That bottle didn't fall. It stood proud and tall. It didn't wiggle. It didn't even jiggle. So the little ol' winemaker decided that if the bottle with the medal didn't wiggle or even jiggle, and didn't fall when all the rest came tumbling down around, then it must be because of the "Medal". "By golly!" he proclaimed for all in the town to hear, "All of my bottles shall have modals . . . I mean, medals!" And that's just what he did.

Now that all of the wines have medals, the Wine Wall in this little wine shop in this little town called McKinney, will never ALMOST come tumbling down again. Lone Star Wine Cellars is the proud owner of a new big yellow mop bucket, and Rubye says the little ol' wine maker is never allowed behind the "Wine Wall" again. As for the little ol' winemaker, he lived happily ever after and to this day denies he had anything to do with..... The Day the Wall ALMOST Came Tumbling Down.
